Views of students from an outreach event in Takoradi:

This seminar has helped me a lot; I’ve learnt a lot including the fact that apart from the international law that governs refugees, there are also laws that protect them. Moreover, I also learnt about how the UN finances their projects and to support other nations that are involved in these refugee crises. So this has helped me a lot and I wish they (UN Agencies) would continue to come here often.

I’ve benefited from this programme a lot. I knew about the UN but I didn’t know much. A friend told me this programme was ongoing at our school’s auditorium so I took the chance to be part of it and in fact it has really made me to be abreast with the activities of the UN in Ghana. I hope programmes such as this would be organized because outreach programmes always bring progress to the lives of others; when you’re informed you can go places.

Actually, I didn’t know much about the UN but with the seminar we had today, I’ve been able to get a lot of insight about the UN. I believe if this seminar can take place every month, it would be very important for other people to also learn more.

I’ve learnt a lot here. I didn’t know much about the UN but through this event they’ve educated us on when it was formed and their activities towards peace which is good for our country. I would like them to come more to our schools and educate us; not once but often and every time they get the chance because we need more information from them.

I came to this programme for the first time and I’ve gotten to know about the UN and what they do. I think that as a student and as an African, we should at least know how to benefit from the UN and help to unite our nation and continent.
Today, the UN has taught me about how other nations come together to make decisions to help other suffering nations and refugees. So I have learnt a lot and I appreciate this forum.

I think this programme is very nice. I came here to network and know more about the UN. I think the UN should do more by organizing such programmes in schools for students to learn more about the UN and how they could contribute to its work as well as interact with UN personnel.

I’ve learnt a lot about the UN programme today. At first, I thought it (the UN) was all about peace but I’ve now learnt that they promote development, sustainability and etc. I wish the education today would not stop here but they should continue to educate more students for them to know more about the UN.
